Chapter 1 by Hannah brown

He needed no introduction. The people in the room already knew who he was, as they had been warned the previous week of the man's arrival. The Sheriff looked towards the Mayor as he walked across the under-maintained office.

"So this is your city, Mayor Klayton. It looks to be dirty, but your people are alive. You've managed this long. But a new threat has been introduced and you might not be able to fight your way out of this one. And I heard supplies are running low." The man ran his hand along the material of one the tattered mustard yellow chair. "We're doing perfectly fine." Mayor Klayton said seemingly bored with the man across from him. He stood up at his desk and handed the man an envelope and showed him the door.
